The brain's reward system can be quickly disrupted by misusing prescription pain medications or using other opioids such as heroin. This can lead to opioid use disorder. The good news is that the brain's reward system can be restored with treatment, including medication and strong support.

Fully funded by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration through the Opioid State Targeted Response grant administered by the Illinois Department of Human Services Division of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse (TI-080231).
